“0000 KILOMETER“

"Izmir and Ege crossed “3,991 kilometers” to be together in Paris, building a life surrounded by love. But now, the distance between them is now “Zero kilometer”. Two lonely souls found solace in each other, becoming one another's family. But with a single phone call, everything changed."

The voice on the other end simply says, 'Hello'—it's Izmir's mother, who was thought to be dead. With that one word and a quick hang-up, Izmir and Ege's lives are forever changed. Izmir returns to Turkey, clinging to the hope that her family is still alive. Ege refuses to let her face this journey alone.

Izmir's father, Mustafa, whom she believed died in a traffic accident, and her mother, Zeynep, were found in a hospital. The accident was staged, and they had been secretly sent on a mission to another country. Now, it's impossible for Izmir to return to Paris. The life that Ege and Izmir built together collapses in an instant.

Once again, Ege and Izmir find themselves drifting apart. Now, they must start over. The fire of love is no longer the same. Yet, reaching out to a fire unknowingly is not the same as touching it, knowing it will burn. Not being able to touch, not being there when you need to be—all the pains of long-distance love have returned. But this time, it's much more intense: the excitement of emotional growth is met with the hesitation of approaching the situation more logically. And now, there's someone else who is determined to win Izmir over—Kuzey.

Izmir is torn between being Ege's Izmir or Kuzey's Izmir. Now, it's time for both Izmir and Ege to make a choice. Will they follow their hearts to reclaim their connection, or will they choose to forge new lives apart?"
